SCHOOL SUPPLY SCHOLARSHIPS AWARDED

In TAREIG's annual contribution to assist worthy and needy students, this year's recipients of scholarships for student supplies are Ryan and Delroy Mess of the Franks Eddy Village. Both Ryan and Delroy are attending the Belmopan Comprehensive High school after graduating from the Franks Eddy village primary school. In a country where school attendance is a privilege paid for by parents and other sponsors, not all children are able to continue their education past the primary levels. This is the third year that TAREIG has been able to support schools and students in schools with educational supplies and scholarships as they are always in need.

Delroy, 12 years old enjoys watching action films with Van Damme and Steven Seagal with his friends. At school his favorite subject is Information Technology.

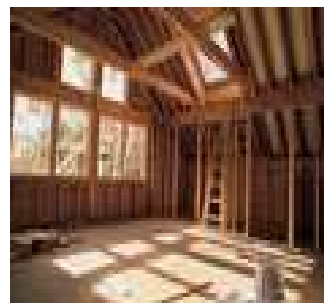

Ryan Mess

Ryan, 14 years old also enjoys technical drawing and Information Technology and hopes to be able to go to college and study Engineering. Support from contributors are always welcomed. Feel free to contact TAREIG for more information on how you can help at info@tareig.com.

VENEZUELA GRANT

Venezuela has provided a 10 million dollar grant to Belize to assist in the economic development of the country. A Steering Committee, appointed by Prime Minister Barrow will oversee the expenditure which is primarily focused on providing grants to residents of Belize for the construction of new homes and repairs. Prime Minister Dean Barrow announced that the grant money from Venezuela "will be divided equally among constituencies." He says that submissions have been made by the committee that was appointed to oversee the process to ensure that the disbursement will be done in a transparent and equitable fashion. There have been recommendations made to the Cabinet that are in review with minor modifications being made. The seven-person committee, comprising four ministers of government and three persons from the private sector have been appointed to recommend to government exactly how this money is to be spent. Distributions to the residents are expected to begin by the end of the year.

GOING GREEN IN BELIZE

Invest with a conscience and go 'green'

Preserving and caring for the environment has never been a more topical issue. Urged to reduce our carbon footprints, many investors are now compelled to buy a second home where sustainable measures are being implemented.

In the country of Belize, ground preparation work has now begun on many eco-resort style developments in the heart of the rainforest. Belize is well known for its eco-focus and has become one of the world's most biologically diverse nations with the integrity of its natural resources still very much intact. As an overall country mandate and through the efforts of the Protected Areas Conservation Trust (PACT), Audubon Society and many other organizations, support for the conservation, preservation, enhancement, and management of Belize's natural resources and protected areas has become an important country attribute.

Eco-friendly features now being incorporated into home building include energy provision from solar, wind and hydro sources, which ensures a lower carbon use and self-sufficiency for energy needs. The layout of the buildings facilitate the flow of air through them, therefore fans are preferred instead of air conditioning (which also cuts down on energy usage). Thatched roofs from sustainable palms help keep the buildings cool and the work-force used are sourced locally, as are the materials used. Rainwater is harvested and stored in underground tanks or cisterns. The abundance of natural springs and river water can also be purified for use, and wastewater is usually recycled.

These are just a few of the ways that sustainability can be maintained. As eco-friendly living becomes more popular and in demand, it will appeal to people as a great way to make a contribution to the environment while at the same time investing in a beautiful country can be viewed as an "investment with a conscience".

READY TO MOVE TO BELIZE?

Considering moving to Belize? Belize is becoming one of the most popular countries for relocation. Aside from the fact that it is the only country in Central America with English as their official language and they have the mix of British colonization and Caribbean lifestyle, their current economic and cultural status makes moving to Belize a delight for many. As a result, many people especially retirees, are moving to Belize to enjoy the good life. There are a lot of frequently asked questions about moving to Belize and you should acquaint yourself with them to be better informed of what entails your relocation.

You can stay in Belize as a short-time visitor, resident, or citizen. As a short-time visitor for more than one month, you will need to have your passport stamped every 30 days' worth of stay. For the first six months, this costs only $12.50 per month.

To qualify for Belize residency, you can leave the country for no longer than two weeks during the first year of living in Belize. After staying in the country for one year, you will be qualified to apply for 'Permanent Residency'. The equivalent of this in the United States is having a 'Green Card' and in Canada being a 'Landed Immigrant'.

To obtain Belize citizenship, you should already have had a minimum permanent residency of five years or more. If you are a spouse of a Belizean, citizenship can be applied after a year of marriage.

As you can see, moving to Belize is relatively easy. Just follow the simple rules and you will be a resident of paradise. Living in Belize is as good as it gets. For more information go to <http://www.moving-to-belize-info.com/>

RAIN FOREST HIKING

Rain forest hiking is available in many Central and South American countries and is becoming an addition to vacationer's agendas as they visit the various tropical locations. From Mexico to Brazil, the locations for rain forests are plentiful.

Rain forests are forests characterized by high rainfall, with definitions setting minimum normal annual rainfall between 1750–2000 mm (68–78 inches). Rain forests are home to two-thirds of all the living animal and plant species and are one of the most complex eco-systems on Earth. It has been estimated that many hundreds of millions of species of plants, insects and microorganisms are still undiscovered.

Popular places for rain forest hiking include Costa Rica, where visitors can venture through the Rincon National Park and the Cotor Rain Forest Reserve. The Amazon rain forest is vast, bigger than Western Europe. Though Colombia and Peru host some of the Amazon, Brazil claims over 60 percent and some are within an hour's drive from Rio, de Janeiro.

International efforts are always in progress to offer protection and slow-down the deforestation of rain forests so that its beauty can be enjoyed by many in the future years.
